Description of institution:

The Norwegian School of Economics and Business Administration (NHH) was founded in 1936 and is today Norway's leading institution within research and education in business administration. NHH has more than 2800 full time students and a total staff of 331.

NHH's activities can be divided into the following areas:

- NHH is to offer higher education within the fields of economics and business administration based on leading research within these fields;
- NHH is to carry out research with a particular national responsibility for basic research and training of researchers within these fields;
- NHH is to convey knowledge about its activities and further the understanding in society of the scientific methods and results within the fields of economics and business administration;
- NHH is to offer or organise continuing/advanced courses within economics and business administration.

NHH strives to be one of the leading research and educational institutions in Europe and endeavours to recruit the top students; based on the belief that excellence in research is the prerequisite of excellence in teaching.

Location and facilities:

NHH's main building is located on a hill with a view over the fjord leading into the city of Bergen, "Byfjorden". 2/3 of the institutions area is located on this hill. At sea-level we have the Merino-building, where you'll find study-halls and auditoriums. NHH has teaching-rooms in most of the buildings which are modern and well equipped. In addition there are many group-rooms at the students' disposal. There are approximately 1500 places available to the students in the form of study-halls and computer work-places. In addition you'll find the library, which has Norway's most comprehensive business and management library collection, as well as the book-store and cafeterias. At NHH everything is nearby. Buildings, facilities, studentgroups, research-environment. The world becomes close at the Norwegian School of Economics and Business Administration in a multicultural learning environment.
